VIRGINIA HAS LARGE INTEREST IN SUIT

Senator Halsey Points Out Reasons for Retaining Major Anderson---Report of Attorney-General Shows Possibilities if State Wins.

Somebody in Washington is quoted in a Richmond afternoon paper of Friday as being "amazed" at the passage of the Halsey bill, retaining the services of Attorney-General William A. Anderson to prosecute the State debt litigation. It was further stated, again from Washington, that this State cannot derive a penny from this suit, since the creditors of West Virginia indebtedness are held by individuals.

As showing how utterly incorrect such a statement is, it is only necessary to quote a few lines from the annual report of the Attorney-General, which has just been issued. Virginia ought to get about $5,000,000, besides other advantages, and this is regarded by persons here as certainly more than a penny, and as seeming to justify the employment of counsel to get it.

The proposition of showing how the Washington individual went off without even touching the hammer is handled more clearly and simply in the exact words of the Attorney-General than in any summary which would be made.

Language of Report.
The importance of this litigation to Virginia is shown by my last four annual reports and will be manifest from the following statement:

"In the first place, Virginia has paid off or redeemed and taken several million dollars of principal and a large amount of the interest of the public debt of the undivided State since January 1, 1861, the date fixed for the settlement between the two States.

"For the sums so paid she has a just and equitable claim against West Virginia for reimbursement from that State to the extent of West Virginia's aliquot liability to contribute to the satisfaction of the common indebtedness which has thus been paid off by Virginia.

"In the second place, there is a large amount of the unfunded and unsettled indebtedness of the undivided State for the payment of which to the extent of her equitable liability therefore West Virginia is bound, but as to which Virginia has not been as yet released.

"She has a right to look to West Virginia to assume and pay her equitable proportion of this large liability, amounting to some $12,730,000 as of July 1, 1871, in exoneration of Virginia and in discharge of West Virginia's just obligation to satisfy the same.

"The authorized representatives of the common creditors, recognizing that Virginia has already assumed or paid as large a sum on account of the debt of the Commonwealth contracted prior to her dismemberment as she could, under all of the circumstances of the case, reasonably be expected to discharge, have agreed, on behalf of the creditors represented by them, constituting nine-tenths or more in amount of the common creditors, to accept such sum as they may receive or be entitled to under any adjudication against West Virginia in this suit, in full discharge and acquittance of any and all claims or demands which they have against the Commonwealth.

Relieve Liabilities.
"The effect of this suit, if there is any decree at all against West Virginia, will be to exonerate and relieve Virginia entirely from any liability on account of that indebtedness.

"This is the most important phase of the litigation for Virginia, and one which gives the greatest promise of benefit to her.

"In the third place, by reason of the terms of the several settlements here made, or attempted to be made, between Virginia and the holders of her obligations, and particularly under the terms of the funding act of March 30, 1871, Virginia sustains a fiduciary relation to the creditors who funded their bonds and deposited them (so far as unfunded) with Virginia, upon the assurance that they would be paid in accordance with such settlement as should be made with West Virginia.

"They have looked to Virginia to use her best endeavors to bring about such a settlement. This Virginia persistently endeavored to accomplish by friendly negotiation with West Virginia.

"Her overtures in that direction having been repeatedly and emphatically rejected by West Virginia, no alternative remained but to invoke the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States, the final arbiter, under our Federal Constitution, of all controversies between States, to bring about such a settlement. This Virginia persistently endeavored to accomplish by friendly negotiation with West Virginia.

mittee and asked that Major Anderson be retained. It was clear to the committee that Judge Williams did not desire to shirk the labor or responsibility involved, but only that the interests of the State should be properly protected. His willingness thus to relegate himself to the rear, where a smaller man might have desired to push himself to the front, is worthy of the highest commendation.

Virginia's Interest.
"Very important interests of Virginia are involved in this suit. A considerable part of the claim used upon is due to Virginia in her own right on account of obligations for which West Virginia is bound which Virginia has paid in full. This claim amounts to from about $1,000,000 to over $3,000,000, according to the basis upon which a settlement with West Virginia may be decreed.

"According to public law and to the decisions of our own highest court, both Virginia and West Virginia are liable for the payment of the entire public debt of the Commonwealth created before her dismemberment. As to portions of that debt Virginia has been entirely released, but as to some $12,730,000 of it, represented by the deferred certificates of 1871, the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia has decided that she has not been released.

"This is to be found in Higginbotham's Executive vs. Commonwealth, 25 Gratt. 377, Antoni v. Wright, 32 Gratt. 364-5, and Greenhow v. Vashon, 31 Va., 343-5.

"By the contract with the representatives of the creditors, who, along with Virginia, will be entitled to the benefit of any recovery in this suit, it is agreed that they will accept any such recovery or adjudication against West Virginia in full settlement, discharge and acquittance of all claims against Virginia in the premises.

"This contingent liability, including interest since July, 1871, exceeds $38,000,000.

"Exoneration from this liability is an exceedingly important feature of this litigation for Virginia.

Complexity of Facts.
"The suit in its various phases is as complex as it is important, covering as it does the public acts, records, accounts and transactions of Virginia since 1822, the documentary and other evidence, accounts, tabulated statements and records, and the reports of many thousand pages. The report of the hearings before the special master alone covers over 3,000 typewritten pages. To fairly comprehend the great number of questions presented by the record, would require months of unremitting study not only of the record, and the evidence and documents and public acts which are a part of it, but also of acts, official reports, accounts and documents which are referred to in it, or which throw light upon the various questions to be decided.

"Up to the present time this litigation has been conducted without cost to Virginia. In the nature of things it has been very expensive.

"West Virginia has already appropriated $100,000 towards meeting these costs. She has retained six or seven special counsel, including Senators Carlisle and Spooner, two of the ablest lawyers in America. What she pays her counsel has not been made public, except that her last act, on the subject provides that Ex-Governor Dawson, one of her counsel, shall receive $5,000 a year. The costs she will incur in defending the suit must considerably exceed $100,000.

"The same is true as to the costs incurred in prosecuting the suit, which, under the contract, have been and will be paid by the representatives of the depositing creditors, except as to such as may be incurred in providing special counsel for Virginia.

State Should Control.
"The interests of Virginia in her own right in the suit are peculiarly such that she should be represented by counsel specially charged with the duty of looking after those interests. Such counsel ought not to be placed in the position of having to look to any source other than Virginia herself for his compensation.

"The matter is now in the hands of the Special Master, Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, and his report may come in at any time. When it does come in the exceptions will have to be made up within a limited period, and this can only be attended to by counsel thoroughly familiar with the case in all of its phases. This will be necessary to be looked after no matter whether the report is favorable to Virginia or otherwise, as it is a case where the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction, and it is of the utmost importance that the record be properly made up. The case may not be finally decided for two or three years, and it will certainly take up a vast amount of the time of counsel engaged until it is concluded. The bill appropriates

$100,000 to be spent under the direction of the Governor and Attorney-General in paying the expenses and securing the services of special counsel for Virginia during the next two years, and in view of the importance to Virginia of the issues involved, I cannot imagine a wiser or more judicious expenditure of the State's money than to secure the services in this matter of counsel possessing the peculiar qualifications of Major Anderson in ability, experience, familiarity with the case, and devoted fidelity to Virginia's interests.

South Holds Key to the Situation.
B. F. Yoakum Tells How It May Relieve Congestion in Cities.

IMPROVE ITS LANDS
With Increased Facilities for Agriculture Prices Will Come Down.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
New York, January 29.—B. T. Yoakum, who within ten years has become one of the recognized masters of transportation development in America, and has earned the title of the empire builder of the Southwest, can see no permanent solution of the problem of the high cost of living under present conditions of agricultural production. He believes that the solution is looked up in the secret of how to check the movement of the population to the urban centers and to entice the people back to the soil, the mother of all wealth.

"The attempt to estimate the amount that will be added to the national wealth when the agriculture potentialities of the South are developed almost staggers the imagination," said Mr. Yoakum to a representative of The Times-Dispatch.

Mr. Yoakum takes the ground that increased agriculture naturally conducted will not decrease the profits of the farm, to whose welfare he is especially committed by his railroad interests. Instead, he is convinced that it would add to them by multiplying the volume, as well as by increasing their markets nearer home, while at the same time it would decrease the cost to the consuming classes in the manufacturing regions and the crowded centers of population.

"Nothing would make more for good citizenship and industrial stability," he declares, "than relieving the congestion in our crowded centers and the scattering of this surplus population to the farming lands of the South. Conditions of food supply and advanced methods in agricultural work are beginning to have their effect upon the neglected opportunities of the South and Southwest.

Greater Than in West.
"The spirit of the country of the Southern States is much greater than that of the Western States. While practically all the lands of the Western States that can be irrigated and are convenient to railroad transportation are now under cultivation, millions of acres in the Southern States, capable of producing crops practically every month in the year, are awaiting development.

"With the same spirit of development, energy and governmental support as have been strongly demonstrated in the Northwest, the lands would yield abundantly. And there are evidences of the awakening of this spirit in the South. By this I mean that substantial work is being done by the heads of the administration of the States that have taken up the real task of looking after their natural advantages.

"For example, Governor Hadley, of Missouri, recently made a trip with the Immigration Commission of Missouri through his State, personally making an investigation of the available lands there that can be placed under the plow. That work by the State officers of Missouri, being vigorously pushed through organizations of that State's citizens. It cannot help but increase the wealth of Missouri, adding to the increased trade to the merchants and manufacturers as well as giving employment to the unemployed that are now seeking an opportunity to leave the towns for country homes.

"Governor Sanders, of Louisiana, is energetically pushing the development of his State in developing its natural resources in building good roads that the farmers may be able to reach their markets with as little expense as possible. By the construction of good roads to the farming districts of Louisiana relief will be given to the congestion in New Orleans by bringing the country and the city closer together.

"The farmers will not have to stand the expense and delay of crossing swollen bayous and rivers or the heavy expense of repairing harness and wagons caused by bad road conditions. Louisiana is also organizing for drainage, and it is estimated that 80 per cent of its 10,000,000 acres of swamp lands, which are now being sold at from $10 to $15 an acre on account of the timber they contain, will sell for from $50 to $85 an acre when ready for cultivation.

Dr. J. H. Coates died at his home, in Rappahannock county, near Peola Mills, this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Mr. Coates was forty years of age. He was a prosperous farmer, and leaves several brothers and sisters.

Phillips Line Makes Assignment.
Norfolk, January 29.—The "Phillips Line," operating a line of freight passenger steamers between Norfolk, Newport News, Petersburg and points on the Appomattox River, filed a deed of assignment here today to J. C. Groner and Bartlett Roper, Jr., trustees, for the benefit of all creditors.

Developing Resources.
"Governor Donaghy, of Arkansas, is earnestly co-operating with the agricultural and commercial organizations of his State in developing its resources, largely through drainage work. He is the active leader of a movement there to bring 6,000,000 acres of rich land under cultivation by drainage. If their plans succeed—and they are hopeful of securing the co-operation and support of the Federal government—the population and agricultural products of Arkansas will be more than doubled. Such work as this means much for the future.

"Governor Patterson, of Tennessee, expressed himself strongly on these points in a recent address in New York, which shows that he believes the South should cease the agitation of old issues and devote itself to the work of upbuilding.

"With the co-operation of the people of the Southern States, with the support of their Senators and Representatives in Congress, more will be accomplished for that section and the nation in the next few years than has been accomplished in the South since the Civil War.

"All that is necessary is for the people owning the property to make known to the working and investing classes of the country their advantages and the vast area of their idle lands, timber and minerals awaiting to be made to yield a good return for labor and money."

Reverting to the subject of high prices, Mr. Yoakum said:

"It has taken ten years, with a steady increase in the price of foodstuffs, to reach the present level of prices, which are practically prohibitive to the poor. This shows that increased production is the hope for lowering prices and bringing the cost of living within the wage scale. Were the South's representatives in Congress as alert and aggressive as have been those from the West and Northwest for the last two or three decades we should soon enlist the support of the Federal government in great appropriations for draining millions of acres of swamp lands that are now being sold at from $10 to $15 an acre on account of the timber they contain, will sell for from $50 to $85 an acre when ready for cultivation.
